Dear Daughter

your letter of March 1st was received last evening too late to send telegram. I telegraphed this morning to rent the property, as the prospective deal with the R. W. Wright Co. is off, at least for the present. I am in favor of renting it the news about Bridgeford is very interesting reading. there was a little thing occurred at the breakfast table this morning that reminds me that the world is but a small place after all. Mr. Sageason the man that sat at the table on your right, was a guard on the train on which your uncle was killed he remembered all about the particular raid of the 11 december 1863 he was only 17 years old when he enlisted. which accounts for his being so young looking

With love
